

Learn2.com

How do you dry flowers without turning the petals brown and moldy? Or how do you turn down those pesky telemarketers who call you every night in hopes of subscribing you to some magazine? The answer is simple: all you have to do is go to Learn2.com. This intriguing website is something completely new and original (in regard to my own experiences, at least). It's an easy, interesting way to learn to do something fun, useful, and (gasp!) even educational.

So what is this website anyway, and what's so great about it? To most people, a title like Learn2 is pretty scary. Who has time to learn these days except in school (if even there)? We are all so overloaded with jobs, school, family, and kids, that we tend to shy away from the unknown. But once you take a few minutes to try this site, I can almost guarantee you'll be hooked, like I am. Where else can you learn to make homemade paper in step-by-step detail? This site is especially captivating because not only can you type in a keyword to learn about something, but there are also daily features that include titles such as "How to soothe a sore throat" and "How to read music". Each step appears in categories according to what you are making (ie: paper making might appear in categories entitled "Preparing your paper" to "Drying"). Each page is adorned with little tidbits of information, such as interesting items to add to your paper, and advice on how to make your paper a certain texture. The steps can either appear one by one, or altogether in a printable version. The best part about it is that while creatively offering information, this site takes away the strict, black and white learning rules, and creates new extremes that make learning fun.

For fun and easy information, Learn2.com is definitely the place to go. Once you get there, you'll have wished you found it ages ago. It's the perfect site for all of your needs: arts and crafts, job-oriented, informational, and everyday. So next time you go online, don't forget to check out Learn2.com, the best place to learn.